-v

lists all of the perl release versions we got the CoreList for.

If you pass a version argument (value of $], like 5.00503 or 5.008008), you get a list of all the modules and their respective versions. (If you have the `version` module, you can also use new-style version numbers, like 5.8.8.)

In module filtering context, it can be used as Perl version filter.

As a special case, if you specify the module name `Unicode`, you'll get the version number of the Unicode Character Database bundled with the requested perl versions.
